The film, starring Madhuri Dixit, Abhishek Bachchan, Sonali Kulkarni, Mithun Chakraborty and Javed Jaffrey in the lead roles, is about the 1962 Indo-China war. The film, which won three awards at the PTC Punjabi Film Festival in January 2012, including Best Film and Best Actor for Abhishek Bachchan, earned around, netting the producers a profit of per film. Plot Prakash (Abhishek Bachchan), a young sepoy of the Indian Army, and his two brothers, Mahesh (Mithun Chakraborty) and Deepak (Javed Jaffrey), try to help Sita (Madhuri Dixit), a young girl whose father, Dharam (Satish Kuthra), is wounded by Pakistani forces during a skirmish. Dharam was the highest ranking soldier of the Indian Army but he wants his sons to join the army as they want to fight in the war. He tells them that because of their mother's (Smita Jaykar) reluctance he could not buy the tickets and he could not travel. Dharam tells them that they can travel on a freight train that is passing by their place. A few days before the war starts, the brothers catch the train and find that it is carrying a large number of army personnel in the forward positions. They decide to try to escape from the train because they know that they cannot carry the wounded Dharam as he would not be able to move for a while. The trio reach a nearby village where they run into Sita and her friends. They are caught, tortured and taken to Pakistan. Prakash and his brothers escape and tell a group of Indians on the Pakistani side what happened. Prakash then meets the Indian soldiers in the village and asks them to rescue his brothers who are being held captive. The Indians tell Prakash that he cannot do anything to help them, as they are on the Pakistani side. Prakash realises
